Dear Peter,

I am writing regarding your complaint relating to Labour Friends of Israel and the Jewish Labour Movement.

It is the job of the Complaints team to review all complaints in a balanced manner to ensure that matters are dealt with appropriately and by the correct unit of the organisation.

After reviewing the correspondence that you provided to the Complaints Team and the office of Jennie Formby, I have concluded that the matter you describe does not amount to a breach of the Labour Party rules and will therefore not be investigated further by the party.

We do not discuss the content of NEC meetings with third parties, however, I can assure you that any decision made regarding Party rules will be taken into account when investigating complaints.

I understand that you may find this response disappointing. However, I can assure you that due care and consideration has been taken when reaching this conclusion.

Best wishes,

Complaints Administrator

The Labour Party
